What is an EGD (Esophagogastroduodenoscopy)?

An endoscopy is a nonsurgical procedure used to examine a patient's digestive tract. An endoscope is a long, thin, flexible instrument with a camera and light on the end. A gastroenterologist can safely guide the endoscope to examine the inside lining of the upper digestive system.

Your doctor may recommend an endoscopy procedure to:

Investigate causes of digestive abnormalities. An endoscopy may help your doctor determine what is causing symptoms such as nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain, difficulty swallowing and gastrointestinal bleeding.

Diagnose and treat digestive diseases and conditions. An endoscopy may be utilized to collect tissue (biopsy) samples and/or treat diseases and conditions such as anemia, bleeding, inflammation, diarrhea, difficulty swallowing, or cancers of the digestive system. Endoscopy can also be used to remove foreign objects lodged in your upper digestive tract.

MEDICATION INSTRUCTIONS AND FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS:

What if I take a blood thinner like Coumadin, Warfarin or Plavix?

We ask that you stop taking blood thinners 7 days prior to your procedure, or as directed by your doctor. We will notify your coagulation clinic about your upcoming procedure and they will follow up with you. You may also contact them directly.

What if I take diabetes medications?

If you are diabetic, take only half of your normal diabetic medication dosage on the day prior to and day of your procedure.

What if I take blood pressure medications?

You may continue taking your blood pressure medication normally unless it has a diuretic (water pill) included. Hydrochlorothiazide (HCTZ) is an example of a diuretic. If you are taking a blood pressure medication with a diuretic, do not take the medication on the day prior to and day of your procedure.

What if I take a diuretic (water pill)?

Do not take your diuretic medication on the day prior to and day of your procedure. Diuretics increase your chances of dehydration, which we want to avoid. Some examples of diuretics are Hydrochlorothiazide (HCTZ) and Lasix.

Why do I need to give five (5) days notice to cancel or reschedule my procedure?

Due to the required preparation for the procedure and as a courtesy to patients on the waitlist, we must ensure everyone has adequate time to prepare with the necessary food restrictions, transportation requirements, and lab work.

I know I was told that you don't know what time my procedure is, but can you please tell me anyway?

No. We are unable to provide specific times for patients and we encourage patients to wait for their pre-op phone call two (2) days prior to find out this information. The Surgery Center is very accommodating if there are any special needs.

Who can I contact with any billing questions?

Our Patient Accounts department can be reached at 503-221-2189, option 1.
